New York WASHINGTON San Francisco

Domestic Rugs Of Superior Quality

Our stock of Domestic Rugs is quite unequalled by any other in Washington in regard to its diversity of makes and the great range of patterns it displays.

Our Wilton, Axminster and Brussels Rugs are stocked in all the regular and a number of unusual sizes. The designs are very varied and reliance may always be placed on their quality.

In the Chaumont Seamless Chenille Axminster and the Kalliston Seamless Plain Color Rugs we show some very distinctive effects in design and colorings. The Wool Art Rug, too, is artistic in appearance, satisfactory in regard to wear and excessively reasonable in price.

WE FURNISH THE MONEY

The members of this organization are a known quantity—you know them—know their methods—know that they furnish the money to run their own business—know that they are not operating under a charter obtained from a foreign state—know that they are not appealing to you to purchase stock in order to get money to open stores—know that they will not tell you that they are selling everything at wholesale price and then charge you a great big retail price. Yes, you know all of this, which accounts in a large measure for the support you have given us.

WOULD END TREATY

Mass Meeting Denounces Discrimination by Russia.

CONGRESS URGED TO ACT

Sulzer Declares There Can Be No Arbitration or Delay.

PASSPORT MUST BE HONORED

Chairman of Foreign Affairs Committee Says It Is Not a Jewish, But an American Question.

REPRESENTATIVE SULZER.

NEW YORK, December 7.—"The Russian treaty must be abrogated ere the adjournment of this session of Congress," declared Representative Sulzer, chairman of the committee on foreign affairs, House of Representatives, at the meeting in Carnegie Hall last night, called to act on Russia's failure to honor passports of American Jews traveling in that country. "The people are aroused as they never have been before over the question, and that there for action has come. There can be no arbitration, no delay; the matter must be settled once for all time, and a new treaty arranged in which Russia can find no loophole to enable her to discriminate against any class of American citizens."

Every one of the 3,200 seats in the hall was occupied and many persons stood in the aisles on the lower floor. A resolution was adopted amid loud cheering calling for the immediate passage of the pending resolution before Congress providing for the abrogation of the Russian treaty of 1832.

Mr. Sulzer continued: "The treaty with Russia says American citizens are entitled to the same rights in Russia that Russian citizens are accorded here. If these rights are not granted them then the treaty is violated. Russia does not deny that she discriminates against certain classes of our citizens, and when complaint is made, figuratively speaking, she shrugs her shoulders and asks: 'What are you going to do about it?'"

"We have carefully lived up to our treaty obligations with Russia. Every Russian coming to this country has been granted all the rights stipulated in the treaty, irrespective of race or religion. 'What are we going to do about it?' Our answer is, 'Abrogate the treaty.'"

An American Question.
"This is not a Jewish question. It is an American question. It involves a great principle. It affects the rights of all American citizens. Russia not only refuses to recognize American passports held by Jews on account of their race, but she also refuses to recognize American passports held by Baptist missionaries, Catholic priests, Presbyterian divines and others on account of their religious belief."

Behind the movement which has crystallized under the auspices of the national citizens' committee are the big men of every race working as brothers in a common interest.

"Not the religion nor the race of a person, but his American citizenship, is the true test of the treatment he shall receive, and the rights he shall enjoy at home and abroad. This is fundamental. We must adhere to it tenaciously."

"Russia's attempt to use her treaty as a weapon to break down the rights of our citizens is a deliberate and shameless, breaking her given word, ignoring the fundamental principles which mark the relationship between nations at peace with one another."

"Diplomatic attempts from time to time have failed to secure from the czar's government even a promise that it would try to give its Jews on account of their race, but her inaction Russia has openly refused to give the matter any consideration, content that America should arbitrate in her country would prevent us from taking any radical step."

"I am this for justice to all to the end, and I shall make every effort to pass my resolution to abrogate the Russian treaty. I have every confidence that it will be enacted into law. To that end, however, every true American must lend such aid as he can."

Dr. White Practically Alone.

Andrew D. White, former ambassador to Russia, stood practically alone among the speakers in dealing with the subject in more diplomatic terms, urging that Russia should be invited to arbitrate the question at The Hague before a movement was made to abrogate the treaty.

Abrogation was demanded unreservedly by most of the speakers. Gov. Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey suggested that an understanding might be reached with the Russian government peacefully when that government was made to realize that the American people were in earnest about the matter; otherwise he was in favor of discontinuing the treaty.

Other Speakers.

Other speakers included Senator James A. O'Gorman, Speaker Champ Clark, William S. Hearst, former president of the United States, Bishop David Greer, Representative Henry M. Goldfogle, Representative William M. Calder, Herbert Parsons, Jacob Gould Schurman, president of Cornell University, and Representative N. E. Kendall.

Senator Jones Penrose of Pennsylvania sent a letter of regret, in which he said that the time has come when a final and definite action to put an end to the discrimination against the American Jews in Russia.

Representative Kendall, who is a member of the committee on foreign relations, presided at the meeting and proposed a resolution within thirty days favoring the abrogation of the treaty.

William G. McAdoo, chairman of the national citizens' committee, presided and introduced former Ambassador White as permanent chairman of the meeting.

Would Refer to The Hague.

After admitting the frequent violations by Russia of the treaty and referring to the demand for its abrogation, Ambassador White said:

"I freely allow that it may be necessary to take this step at some later stage in our effort. It is not better for us to concentrate that we hold the abrogation of the treaty for at least a short time in reserve?"

"He preferred that the question first be referred to the tribunal of The Hague."

Senator O'Gorman said that if the

ALL YOU NEED IS A CASCARET TONIGHT

No Sick Headache, Bilious Stomach, Coated Tongue or Constipated Bowels by Morning.

Turn the rascals out—the headache, the biliousness, the indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out tonight and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse and regulate your stomach; remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and that misery-making gas; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out of the system all the decomposed waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head and cheerfulness for months. Children love to take Cascarets because they taste good—never gripe or sicken.

United States was to maintain its national honor and be loyal to the traditions of its founders it must endeavor to insist that in the composite citizenry of the country there can be no distinction. Referring to the Russian attitude, Mr. Hearst said:

"This insolent action of Russia does not affect one class of citizens alone, but it affects the whole American people. It is not merely a reflection on the Jews, but an insult to our nation. Let the United States assert its dignity and, if necessary, employ the fullness of its power in doing so."

Gov. Wilson for Diplomacy.

Gov. Wilson expressed the opinion that Russia might be influenced to live up to the treaty of 1832 when she was made to realize that the American people were in earnest about it. He advocated diplomatic and peaceful methods to bring this result about, but added that the treaty should be abrogated unless Russia changed her attitude of discrimination against the passports of American Jews.

Bishop Greer contended that it was a moral question, and it was as much a duty for this country to see that Russia lived up to the treaty as to live up to it ourselves.

Resolution Adopted.

The following resolution was adopted: "Resolved, That this meeting, called by representatives from every part of the United States, and reflecting every shade of public opinion, urgently request the Congress of the United States at its present session to adopt the resolution now pending in the Senate and House of Representatives for the abrogation of the treaty of 1832 between the United States and Russia, by giving one year's notice of its termination pursuant to the expressed provision, and that each country at least shall no longer behold with equanimity a classification of its citizens which, if ripened into a precedent would eventually undermine that political system which has made it the greatest moral power on the earth."

A CHRISTMAS EVE

In the Jungles of Africa, Where Tragedy Stalked Supreme.

Our Sunday Magazine is not given to making special editions to fit the various holidays, but it does, however, print such stories as it has been able to secure without being specially prepared for that purpose, as may be particularly adapted to the season at hand. And so in our next issue will appear some stories of peculiar Christmas significance and of unusual quality.

The first of these, and the leader, is "A Lost Pawn," a splendid tale of a remarkable Christmas incident that occurred in the heart of Africa when Edgar Beecher Bronson, the author, made his famous hunting trip through the Sudd and the Nile just before Col. Roosevelt started on his memorable hunt.

"When toward evening we made camp high up among the euphorbia and mimosa thickets that cover the craggy slopes of the valley of the Ngari Kiti river, along which we had been slowly drifting," writes Mr. Bronson, "we were none too pleasantly surprised to see the thin column of smoke of a campfire rising from a recess of the jungle a few hundred yards below us, near to the stream. * * * The camp was dark—men, women and children—blind drunk all, as I had occasion to see an entire village of Masai or Wakamba drunk, to the latest baby in arms, grinning and gabbling like apes or groveling and grunting like surfeited pigs."

"Filled with disgust of the sordid scene, I was about to turn away, when, from its concealment behind the huddled frame of a giant eland, there slowly lifted the iron-gray head—could my eyes deceive me?—yes, the iron-gray head of a white man."

"Slowly a short, slender, almost emaciated figure rose to its feet, while a pair of pathetically thin hands alternately rubbed his eyes and pressed and pressed his temples. Then, roused a bit, it walked unsteadily to the nearest jar, pulled its cork with a trembling hand, greedily to the last drop, seated itself upon an upturned empty jar, and there sat staring into the embers of the dying fire."

And this man had once been an officer in the British army, and in his hand he won the Victoria Cross, that token of splendid heroism. It was a strange and remarkable tale that this relic of the heroic past told when, on this gloomy Christmas eve, revived with copious drafts of spirits, he sat before the visitors, and told the story of his life and his adventures with greater interest and vividness than Mr. Bronson, for he knows the life of the jungle and the wilderness, and has had long training as a writer. The story is an aspirant for one of the prizes in our competition, and it is indeed a formidable competitor. It appears, remember, in our next Sunday Magazine.

FUR SEAL TREATY.

Hanihara Carries Japanese Exchange Copy to State Department.

Mr. Hanihara, secretary of the Japanese embassy, and charge, called at the State Department yesterday bearing the exchange copy of the treaty for the proposed fur seal exchange, negotiated in this city last summer. The British exchange copy is already in Washington. When the Russian copy is received in the course of a few days the exchange of ratifications will be completed inside of the time limit, December 15.

Easy Way to Cleanse

The Hair and Scalp

"Nature intended every woman should have a wealth of beautiful hair—hair that can be arranged into an attractive coiffure which accentuates her physical charms," writes Mrs. Mac Murray, in the Denver Advocate.

"Much depends upon the cleansing bath. If it be of an alkali nature, the scalp and hair follicles suffer injury and the hair grows brittle and falls out. A shampoo mixture, made by dissolving one teaspoonful carboxin in a cup hot water, gently, yet thoroughly, removes every trace of dirt and grease, and so prevents the hair roots and delicate tissues that they become strong and healthy. After rinsing, the scalp is clean and pliant, and the hair is soft, glossy and easy to do up. Carboxin cleanses not only promotes a healthy condition, but encourages an abundant and silky growth of hair."
